Business men fight

New Tork business men who live at Kearney, N. J., missed their regular trains into town this morning because the Hudson County Catholic Protectory in Kearney was in danger of burning.

They were waiting in the station when the cloud of smoke that began to pour from the laundry building gave warning window was the same, and the breeze carried all seven pairs away. that the blase was of serious propor-tions. Every commuter forgot that he was due in Manhattan at 8 o'clock.

They got all that they were lookvolunteer hose and engine companies in the two villages arrived flames were pouring out of all the windows of the laundry, a two-story brick structure, which also housed the en-gine and power plant of the estab-lishment. They stretched hose lines, and turned on their water, but nothing happened. A little water trickled out happened. A likile water trickled out of the nossies, but not enough to break a window pane.

Owing to the lack of water pressure, it was useless for the firemen to try to save the laundry building, and they bent all their efforts upon saving the adjoining buildings. The chapel was the nearest, only twenty-five feet from the burning structure, and squads of the volunteer firemen were detailed to mount the roof and beat back the flames. In the chapel all of the 150 boys of the school had been gathered at mass, when the slarm was given at 7 o'clock. They were badly frightened, but all were gotten out in safety.

One unlooked-for touch of excitement, came when James Durkin of Hose Company No. 2 had his right hand almost severed by a slate that fell from the roof of the burning lagindry. The damage was estimated at $100.00.
